|  | RATE  | APR   | Home affordability in America dropped to a record low in 2023, according to a report released last week by the real estate brokerage firm Redfin. The Seattle-based company said this year has been the most expensive year for home-buying in its records. A homebuyer making the median U.S. annual income of $78,642 had to spend 41.4% of their total income on housing costs if they bought a median-priced U.S. house ($408,806) in 2023. "A perfect storm of inflation, high prices, soaring mortgage rates and low housing supply caused 2023 to go down as the least affordable year for housing in recent history," Redfin Senior Economist Elijah de la Campa said in a press release.Redfin's analysis assumes a 20% down payment, principal, interest, taxes and insurance; median home sale prices; and average monthly mortgage rates. The report noted that the housing market of recent years has totally blown up the conventional wisdom on budgeting: Don't spend more than 30% of your earnings on housing. | CONV        | RATE  | APR   | Home affordability in America dropped to a record low in 2023, according to a report released last week by the real estate brokerage firm Redfin. The Seattle-based company said this year has been the most expensive year for home-buying in its records. A homebuyer making the median U.S. annual income of $78,642 had to spend 41.4% of their total income on housing costs if they bought a median-priced U.S. house ($408,806) in 2023. "A perfect storm of inflation, high prices, soaring mortgage rates and low housing supply caused 2023 to go down as the least affordable year for housing in recent history," Redfin Senior Economist Elijah de la Campa said in a press release. Redfin's analysis assumes a 20% down payment, principal, interest, taxes and insurance; median home sale prices; and average monthly mortgage rates. The report noted that the housing market of recent years has totally blown up the conventional wisdom on budgeting: Don't spend more than 30% of your earnings on housing. |  | RATE  | APR   | Home affordability in America dropped to a record low in 2023, according to a report released last week by the real estate brokerage firm Redfin. The Seattle-based company said this year has been the most expensive year for home-buying in its records. A homebuyer making the median U.S. annual income of $78,642 had to spend 41.4% of their total income on housing costs if they bought a median-priced U.S. house ($408,806) in 2023. "A perfect storm of inflation, high prices, soaring mortgage rates and low housing supply caused 2023 to go down as the least affordable year for housing in recent history," Redfin Senior Economist Elijah de la Campa said in a press release.Redfin's analysis assumes a 20% down payment, principal, interest, taxes and insurance; median home sale prices; and average monthly mortgage rates. The report noted that the housing market of recent years has totally blown up the conventional wisdom on budgeting: Don't spend more than 30% of your earnings on housing.
