WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 5.16%	APR 5.19%	Home building is an area of the residential sector that appears to be losing a bit of momentum. Total housing starts inched up 0.3% to a 1.79 million-unit pace during March. However, single-family starts declined 1.7% during the month, and single-family permits dropped 4.8%. Over the past three months, single-family permitting has fallen slightly below the trend in starts. The slight down draft in permits as well as a string of decline in builder sentiment suggest builders may be tapping the breaks on new development, as rising mortgage rates stand to price out buyers and limit the extent to which builders can pass on higher input costs. The NAHB Housing Market Index fell to 77 in April, a seven-month low and the fourth consecutive decline. Notably, the prospective buyers traffic component dropped six points to 60, the lowest since August 2021. Home builders continue to contend with shortages of key building materials and labor; however, these constraints look to be easing somewhat. The backlog of single-family homes that have been authorized but have not yet been started has soared over the past year but now appears to be leveling off. ## WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE	APR	Home building is an area of the residential sector that appears to be losing a bit of momentum. Total housing starts inched up 0.3% to a 1.79 million-unit pace during March. However, single-family starts declined 1.7% during the month, and single-family permits dropped 4.8%. Over the past three months, single-family permitting has fallen slightly below the trend in starts. The slight down draft in permits as well as a string of decline in builder sentiment suggest builders may be tapping the breaks on new development, as rising mortgage rates stand to price out buyers and limit the extent to which builders can pass on higher input costs. The NAHB Housing Market Index fell to 77 in April, a seven-month low and the fourth consecutive decline. Notably, the prospective buyers traffic component dropped six points to 60, the lowest since August 2021. Home builders continue to contend with shortages of key building materials and labor; however, these constraints look to be easing somewhat. The backlog of single-family homes that have been authorized but have not yet been started has soared over the past year but now appears to be leveling off. ## WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
	RATE	APR	Home building is an area of the residential sector that appears to be losing a bit of momentum. Total housing starts inched up 0.3% to a 1.79 million-unit pace during March. However, single-family starts declined 1.7% during the month, and single-family permits dropped 4.8%. Over the past three months, single-family permitting has fallen slightly below the trend in starts. The slight down draft in permits as well as a string of decline in builder sentiment suggest builders may be tapping the breaks on new development, as rising mortgage rates stand to price out buyers and limit the extent to which builders can pass on higher input costs. The NAHB Housing Market Index fell to 77 in April, a seven-month low and the fourth consecutive decline. Notably, the prospective buyers traffic component dropped six points to 60, the lowest since August 2021. Home builders continue to contend with shortages of key building materials and labor; however, these constraints look to be easing somewhat. The backlog of single-family homes that have been authorized but have not yet been started has soared over the past year but now appears to be leveling off.
