WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 2.79%	APR 2.99%	Housing Data and FOMC Outcome Show Economic Recovery Still Intact Attention this week was primarily focused on the outcome of the September 21-22 Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) meeting. As broadly expected, committee members did not make any major changes to monetary policy. Officials elected to keep the target range for the fed funds rate unchanged at 0.00% to 0.25%, and also decided to maintain its monthly pace of asset purchases. Notably, however, the FOMC said that scaling back its bond buying program "may soon be warranted." While the housing market clearly has benefited from low mortgage rates, the main driver behind the surge in activity mostly has been owed to buyers in desperate search of more livable spaces to accommodate virtual activities and to increase the tolerability of spending more time at home. Some evidence for this claim is that existing home sales have cooled down significantly over the past few months, all while mortgage rates have remained exceptionally low. For context, the average 30-year commitment rate was just 2.8% in August, which is close to the record lows hit last year. During that same month, existing sales declined 2.0% to a 5.88 million-unit pace. Compared to recent history, this is still a strong pace of sales, which exceeds the pace hit at any point between 2010 and 2019. That said, sales are now running a bit slower than the feverish 6.66 million-unit pace seen in January 2021. Source: Wells Fargo Weekly Economic & Financial Commentary

CONV	RATE	APR	Housing Data and FOMC Outcome Show Economic Recovery Still Intact Attention this week was primarily focused on the outcome of the September 21-22 Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) meeting. As broadly expected, committee members did not make any major changes to monetary policy. Officials elected to keep the target range for the fed funds rate unchanged at 0.00% to 0.25%, and also decided to maintain its monthly pace of asset purchases. Notably, however, the FOMC said that scaling back its bond buying program "may soon be warranted." While the housing market clearly has benefited from low mortgage rates, the main driver behind the surge in activity mostly has been owed to buyers in desperate search of more livable spaces to accommodate virtual activities and to increase the tolerability of spending more time at home. Some evidence for this claim is that existing home sales have cooled down significantly over the past few months, all while mortgage rates have remained exceptionally low. For context, the average 30-year commitment rate was just 2.8% in August, which is close to the record lows hit last year. During that same month, existing sales declined 2.0% to a 5.88 million-unit pace. Compared to recent history, this is still a strong pace of sales, which exceeds the pace hit at any point between 2010 and 2019. That said, sales are now running a bit slower than the feverish 6.66 million-unit pace seen in January 2021. Source: Wells Fargo Weekly Economic & Financial Commentary

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 2.79%	APR 2.99%	Housing Data and FOMC Outcome Show Economic Recovery Still Intact Attention this week was primarily focused on the outcome of the September 21-22 Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) meeting. As broadly expected, committee members did not make any major changes to monetary policy. Officials elected to keep the target range for the fed funds rate unchanged at 0.00% to 0.25%, and also decided to maintain its monthly pace of asset purchases. Notably, however, the FOMC said that scaling back its bond buying program "may soon be warranted." While the housing market clearly has benefited from low mortgage rates, the main driver behind the surge in activity mostly has been owed to buyers in desperate search of more livable spaces to accommodate virtual activities and to increase the tolerability of spending more time at home. Some evidence for this claim is that existing home sales have cooled down significantly over the past few months, all while mortgage rates have remained exceptionally low. For context, the average 30-year commitment rate was just 2.8% in August, which is close to the record lows hit last year. During that same month, existing sales declined 2.0% to a 5.88 million-unit pace. Compared to recent history, this is still a strong pace of sales, which exceeds the pace hit at any point between 2010 and 2019. That said, sales are now running a bit slower than the feverish 6.66 million-unit pace seen in January 2021. Source: Wells Fargo Weekly Economic & Financial Commentary
