WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 3.47%	APR 3.59%	At their October meeting, The Fed noted that "data on construction and sales suggested the decline in mortgage rates since late 2018 was starting to show through to housing activity. Housing starts rose 3.8% in October, while permits surged 5.0% to the strongest pace since May 2007. Some of the strength was due to a jump in the volatile multi-family segment, but single-family permits have now risen for six consecutive months, pointing clearly to upward momentum in residential construction. Existing home sales also rose nicely in October, climbing 1.9% to a 5.46 million-unit pace. The median resale price for entry-level homes rose 6.2% over the year, the strongest pace since July 2017. After a solid contribution in Q3, it is already looking like housing will again boost the GDP growth in Q4, after a year and a half of drag. Consumer Confidence rose to 137.9, marking the highest level of confidence since the exuberance at the tail end of the dot-com euphoria in 2000. In a typical cycle, major drivers of confidence are the unemployment rate, the stock market and gas prices. The stock market remains near all-time highs, unemployment is near a 50-year low, and gas prices have been trending lower since May. Source: Wells Fargo Weekly Economic & Financial Commentary

WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE	APR	At their October meeting, The Fed noted that "data on construction and sales suggested the decline in mortgage rates since late 2018 was starting to show through to housing activity. Housing starts rose 3.8% in October, while permits surged 5.0% to the strongest pace since May 2007. Some of the strength was due to a jump in the volatile multi-family segment, but single-family permits have now risen for six consecutive months, pointing clearly to upward momentum in residential construction. Existing home sales also rose nicely in October, climbing 1.9% to a 5.46 million-unit pace. The median resale price for entry-level homes rose 6.2% over the year, the strongest pace since July 2017. After a solid contribution in Q3, it is already looking like housing will again boost the GDP growth in Q4, after a year and a half of drag. Consumer Confidence rose to 137.9, marking the highest level of confidence since the exuberance at the tail end of the dot-com euphoria in 2000. In a typical cycle, major drivers of confidence are the unemployment rate, the stock market and gas prices. The stock market remains near all-time highs, unemployment is near a 50-year low, and gas prices have been trending lower since May. Source: Wells Fargo Weekly Economic &amp; Financial Commentary

WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE	APR	At their October meeting, The Fed noted that "data on construction and sales suggested the decline in mortgage rates since late 2018 was starting to show through to housing activity. Housing starts rose 3.8% in October, while permits surged 5.0% to the strongest pace since May 2007. Some of the strength was due to a jump in the volatile multi-family segment, but single-family permits have now risen for six consecutive months, pointing clearly to upward momentum in residential construction. Existing home sales also rose nicely in October, climbing 1.9% to a 5.46 million-unit pace. The median resale price for entry-level homes rose 6.2% over the year, the strongest pace since July 2017. After a solid contribution in Q3, it is already looking like housing will again boost the GDP growth in Q4, after a year and a half of drag. Consumer Confidence rose to 137.9, marking the highest level of confidence since the exuberance at the tail end of the dot-com euphoria in 2000. In a typical cycle, major drivers of confidence are the unemployment rate, the stock market and gas prices. The stock market remains near all-time highs, unemployment is near a 50-year low, and gas prices have been trending lower since May. Source: Wells Fargo Weekly Economic &amp; Financial Commentary
