WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 5.99%	APR 6.08%	The housing market is essentially frozen. Home sales are stuck at a very low level, set back by weak buyer demand amid high mortgage rates and a softening labor market. Existing home sales perked up slightly in July (+2.0%) but have essentially moved sideways through the noise, up only 0.8% year-over-year. New home sales descended 0.6% in July, marking a more substantial 8.2% year-over-year downturn. New home builders had previously been able to offset poor affordability conditions with incentives like price cuts and mortgage rate buy-downs, but these incentives seem to be losing effectiveness. Mortgage rates are currently sitting at an 11-month low (6.26%), according to Freddie Mac. However, this reduction is unlikely to make a meaningful mark on home sales in August. Existing home sales count deal closings based on mortgage rates set in the months immediately prior. The average 30-year mortgage rate in June and July was still bounded between 6.7%-6.8%. New home sales are a bit different, measured at the time of contract signings. While new home buyers may have been able to secure a somewhat more favorable mortgage rate in August, rates were still elevated at 6.6% on average and rising unemployment was likely an offsetting headwind. We forecast that new home sales slipped by 0.6% in August to an annualized rate of 648K. We similarly expect existing home sales fell by 1.5% to an annualized pace of 3.95 million. 			The housing market is essentially frozen. Home sales are stuck at a very low level, set back by weak buyer demand amid high mortgage rates and a softening labor market. Existing home sales perked up slightly in July (+2.0%) but have essentially moved sideways through the noise, up only 0.8% year-over-year. New home sales descended 0.6% in July, marking a more substantial 8.2% year-over-year downturn. New home builders had previously been able to offset poor affordability conditions with incentives like price cuts and mortgage rate buy-downs, but these incentives seem to be losing effectiveness. Mortgage rates are currently sitting at an 11-month low (6.26%), according to Freddie Mac. However, this reduction is unlikely to make a meaningful mark on home sales in August. Existing home sales count deal closings based on mortgage rates set in the months immediately prior. The average 30-year mortgage rate in June and July was still bounded between 6.7%-6.8%. New home sales are a bit different, measured at the time of contract signings. While new home buyers may have been able to secure a somewhat more favorable mortgage rate in August, rates were still elevated at 6.6% on average and rising unemployment was likely an offsetting headwind. We forecast that new home sales slipped by 0.6% in August to an annualized rate of 648K. We similarly expect existing home sales fell by 1.5% to an annualized pace of 3.95 million. ## WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 5.99%	APR 6.08%
FHA	5.50%	6.34%	The housing market is essentially frozen. Home sales are stuck at a very low level, set back by weak buyer demand amid high mortgage rates and a softening labor market. Existing home sales perked up slightly in July (+2.0%) but have essentially moved sideways through the noise, up only 0.8% year-over-year. New home sales descended 0.6% in July, marking a more substantial 8.2% year-over-year downturn. New home builders had previously been able to offset poor affordability conditions with incentives like price cuts and mortgage rate buy-downs, but these incentives seem to be losing effectiveness. Mortgage rates are currently sitting at an 11-month low (6.26%), according to Freddie Mac. However, this reduction is unlikely to make a meaningful mark on home sales in August. Existing home sales count deal closings based on mortgage rates set in the months immediately prior. The average 30-year mortgage rate in June and July was still bounded between 6.7%-6.8%. New home sales are a bit different, measured at the time of contract signings. While new home buyers may have been able to secure a somewhat more favorable mortgage rate in August, rates were still elevated at 6.6% on average and rising unemployment was likely an offsetting headwind. We forecast that new home sales slipped by 0.6% in August to an annualized rate of 648K. We similarly expect existing home sales fell by 1.5% to an annualized pace of 3.95 million.
