WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 6.25%	APR 6.45%	Home prices moved up in March, as buyer demand continued to stabilize. The seasonally adjusted S&P CoreLogic Case-Shiller National Home Price Index increased 0.4% over the month, echoing February's 0.3% uptick. Lower mortgage rates in January and February seem to have sparked the demand improvement at the start of the year, especially for new buyers who do not need to trade up to higher rates to purchase a home. Yet, uncertainty around the debt ceiling and possible expectations for another rate hike pushed average daily mortgage rates back up above 7% last week, sparking an 11% retreat in mortgage applications for purchase over the month of May. The recent pop in rates likely stifled buyer activity over the past few weeks. Scarce resale supply has nudged buyers toward new homes, supporting a modest rebound in residential construction. As of April, single-family housing starts have ticked up for two of the past three months and single-family building permits have posted three consecutive monthly gains. These improvements are yet to be reflected in the Census' residential construction spending data, however, April's construction spending report showed a 0.8% drop in private single-family outlays, marking one full year of sliding single-family construction spending. WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

CONV	RATE 6.25%	APR 6.45%
FHA	6.13%	6.25%
10 Yr Yield	3.69%		Home prices moved up in March, as buyer demand continued to stabilize. The seasonally adjusted S&P CoreLogic Case-Shiller National Home Price Index increased 0.4% over the month, echoing February's 0.3% uptick. Lower mortgage rates in January and February seem to have sparked the demand improvement at the start of the year, especially for new buyers who do not need to trade up to higher rates to purchase a home. Yet, uncertainty around the debt ceiling and possible expectations for another rate hike pushed average daily mortgage rates back up above 7% last week, sparking an 11% retreat in mortgage applications for purchase over the month of May. The recent pop in rates likely stifled buyer activity over the past few weeks. Scarce resale supply has nudged buyers toward new homes, supporting a modest rebound in residential construction. As of April, single-family housing starts have ticked up for two of the past three months and single-family building permits have posted three consecutive monthly gains. These improvements are yet to be reflected in the Census' residential construction spending data, however, April's construction spending report showed a 0.8% drop in private single-family outlays, marking one full year of sliding single-family construction spending. WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV			Home prices moved up in March, as buyer demand continued to stabilize. The seasonally adjusted S&P CoreLogic Case-Shiller National Home Price Index increased 0.4% over the month, echoing February's 0.3% uptick. Lower mortgage rates in January and February seem to have sparked the demand improvement at the start of the year, especially for new buyers who do not need to trade up to higher rates to purchase a home. Yet, uncertainty around the debt ceiling and possible expectations for another rate hike pushed average daily mortgage rates back up above 7% last week, sparking an 11% retreat in mortgage applications for purchase over the month of May. The recent pop in rates likely stifled buyer activity over the past few weeks. Scarce resale supply has nudged buyers toward new homes, supporting a modest rebound in residential construction. As of April, single-family housing starts have ticked up for two of the past three months and single-family building permits have posted three consecutive monthly gains. These improvements are yet to be reflected in the Census' residential construction spending data, however, April's construction spending report showed a 0.8% drop in private single-family outlays, marking one full year of sliding single-family construction spending.
