The housing market is under severe pressure from the weight of higher mortgage rates, which are further reducing affordability and pushing prospective buyers to the sideline. This has been particularly evident in the sentiment data with a rapid deterioration in consumers' views of now being a "good time" to buy a home. Home builders are also losing confidence fast. The NAHB/Wells Fargo Housing Market Index tumbled 12 points in July, marking its second-largest one-month drop on record. Through June, new home sales were 17.4% below the pace registered during the same period last year, and we expect further weakness in July. Specifically, we estimate new home sales slipped to a 581,000-unit annual pace last month. With sales slowing, inventories are rising in June, the current sales and inventory dynamics indicated a 9.3-month supply of new homes, which was the highest level since May 2010. We would not be surprised to see this inch even higher in July. Rising inventories and slowing buyer demand has led to a softer pace appreciation, which may eventually help reduce growing affordability issues. For now, the recent slide in new home sales suggests price increases and rising interest rates are choking off demand much more quickly, and are ushering in a more pronounced overall economic slowdown. NATIONAL BUILDER DIVISION

WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 5.50%	APR 5.65%	The housing market is under severe pressure from the weight of higher mortgage rates, which are further reducing affordability and pushing prospective buyers to the sideline. This has been particularly evident in the sentiment data with a rapid deterioration in consumers' views of now being a "good time" to buy a home. Home builders are also losing confidence fast. The NAHB/Wells Fargo Housing Market Index tumbled 12 points in July, marking its second-largest one-month drop on record. Through June, new home sales were 17.4% below the pace registered during the same period last year, and we expect further weakness in July. Specifically, we estimate new home sales slipped to a 581,000-unit annual pace last month. With sales slowing, inventories are rising in June, the current sales and inventory dynamics indicated a 9.3-month supply of new homes, which was the highest level since May 2010. We would not be surprised to see this inch even higher in July. Rising inventories and slowing buyer demand has led to a softer pace appreciation, which may eventually help reduce growing affordability issues. For now, the recent slide in new home sales suggests price increases and rising interest rates are choking off demand much more quickly, and are ushering in a more pronounced overall economic slowdown.

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 5.50%	APR 5.65%	The housing market is under severe pressure from the weight of higher mortgage rates, which are further reducing affordability and pushing prospective buyers to the sideline. This has been particularly evident in the sentiment data with a rapid deterioration in consumers' views of now being a "good time" to buy a home. Home builders are also losing confidence fast. The NAHB/Wells Fargo Housing Market Index tumbled 12 points in July, marking its second-largest one-month drop on record. Through June, new home sales were 17.4% below the pace registered during the same period last year, and we expect further weakness in July. Specifically, we estimate new home sales slipped to a 581,000-unit annual pace last month. With sales slowing, inventories are rising in June, the current sales and inventory dynamics indicated a 9.3-month supply of new homes, which was the highest level since May 2010. We would not be surprised to see this inch even higher in July. Rising inventories and slowing buyer demand has led to a softer pace appreciation, which may eventually help reduce growing affordability issues. For now, the recent slide in new home sales suggests price increases and rising interest rates are choking off demand much more quickly, and are ushering in a more pronounced overall economic slowdown.
