CONV	RATE 6.75%	APR 6.93%

10 Yr Yield	4.45%
			The Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) decided to keep the target range for the federal funds rate unchanged at 4.25%-4.50% last week. After cutting rates by 100 bps last year, the Committee has now been on hold for three consecutive meetings. The decision to keep policy unchanged was unanimously supported by all 12 voting members. The best course of action for the FOMC may simply be to wait for more clarity. Indeed, Chair Powell reiterated during his press conference that "we don't think we need to be in a hurry to adjust rates." Given the underlying solid nature of the economy, Powell said that "the costs of waiting are fairly low." In view of the economy's sustained momentum recently, we now expect the FOMC to keep policy unchanged through the summer. Specifically, we look for the Committee to resume its easing cycle with a 50 bps rate cut at the September meeting followed by two 25 bps rate reductions at the October and December meetings. After that, we suspect the Committee will hold the target range for the federal funds rate steady at 3.25%-3.50% through 2026. We readily acknowledge that uncertainty around our economic outlook remains greater than normal. Our forecast hinges on our expectation for the Fed to "look through" the price level increase caused by tariffs, especially as long-term measures of inflation expectations remain anchored. However, if inflation were to show signs of becoming more entrenched, then the FOMC may be less inclined to ease policy. Source: Wells Fargo Bank Weekly Economic & Financial Commentary

The Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) decided to keep the target range for the federal funds rate unchanged at 4.25%-4.50% last week. After cutting rates by 100 bps last year, the Committee has now been on hold for three consecutive meetings. The decision to keep policy unchanged was unanimously supported by all 12 voting members. The best course of action for the FOMC may simply be to wait for more clarity. Indeed, Chair Powell reiterated during his press conference that "we don't think we need to be in a hurry to adjust rates." Given the underlying solid nature of the economy, Powell said that "the costs of waiting are fairly low." In view of the economy's sustained momentum recently, we now expect the FOMC to keep policy unchanged through the summer. Specifically, we look for the Committee to resume its easing cycle with a 50 bps rate cut at the September meeting followed by two 25 bps rate reductions at the October and December meetings. After that, we suspect the Committee will hold the target range for the federal funds rate steady at 3.25%-3.50% through 2026. We readily acknowledge that uncertainty around our economic outlook remains greater than normal. Our forecast hinges on our expectation for the Fed to "look through" the price level increase caused by tariffs, especially as long-term measures of inflation expectations remain anchored. However, if inflation were to show signs of becoming more entrenched, then the FOMC may be less inclined to ease policy. Source: Wells Fargo Bank Weekly Economic & Financial Commentary

		The Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) decided to keep the target range for the federal funds rate unchanged at 4.25%-4.50% last week. After cutting rates by 100 bps last year, the Committee has now been on hold for three consecutive meetings. The decision to keep policy unchanged was unanimously supported by all 12 voting members. The best course of action for the FOMC may simply be to wait for more clarity. Indeed, Chair Powell reiterated during his press conference that "we don't think we need to be in a hurry to adjust rates." Given the underlying solid nature of the economy, Powell said that "the costs of waiting are fairly low." In view of the economy's sustained momentum recently, we now expect the FOMC to keep policy unchanged through the summer. Specifically, we look for the Committee to resume its easing cycle with a 50 bps rate cut at the September meeting followed by two 25 bps rate reductions at the October and December meetings. After that, we suspect the Committee will hold the target range for the federal funds rate steady at 3.25%-3.50% through 2026. We readily acknowledge that uncertainty around our economic outlook remains greater than normal. Our forecast hinges on our expectation for the Fed to "look through" the price level increase caused by tariffs, especially as long-term measures of inflation expectations remain anchored. However, if inflation were to show signs of becoming more entrenched, then the FOMC may be less inclined to ease policy. Source: Wells Fargo Bank Weekly Economic & Financial Commentary
