WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV			The housing market continues to be white-hot, but there are some signs of a modest cool down on the horizon. Sales improved during January, with existing home sales advancing 0.6% and new home sales rising 4.3%. The robust pace of sales recently has been mostly owed to increased household space needs and low mortgage rates. While larger space requirements are still driving purchase demand, mortgage rates have begun to creep up alongside a climbing 10-year Treasury yield. Mortgage rates are still very low by historical standards, but rising financing costs together with low inventories and double-digit home price appreciation may be starting to damper buying conditions. Pending home sales, which lead contract closings by one to two months, slipped 2.8% in January. What's more, mortgage applications for purchase declined in February after steadily climbing for most of January. With both mortgage applications and pending home sales retreating, we expect home sales to pull back in coming months. Even with some moderation, however, favorable demographics and rebounding job growth should help keep sales running at a fairly robust rate this year. Source: Wells Fargo Bank. Financing			Market Commentary
CONV
RATE
3.07%			3.23%
FHA			2.25%
10 Yr Yield			2.91%
1.70%			The housing market continues to be white-hot, but there are some signs of a modest cool down on the horizon. Sales improved during January, with existing home sales advancing 0.6% and new home sales rising 4.3%. The robust pace of sales recently has been mostly owed to increased household space needs and low mortgage rates. While larger space requirements are still driving purchase demand, mortgage rates have begun to creep up alongside a climbing 10-year Treasury yield. Mortgage rates are still very low by historical standards, but rising financing costs together with low inventories and double-digit home price appreciation may be starting to dampen buying conditions. Pending home sales, which lead contract closings by one to two months, slipped 2.8% in January. What's more, mortgage applications for purchase declined in February after steadily climbing for most of January. With both mortgage applications and pending home sales retreating, we expect home sales to pull back in coming months. Even with some moderation, however, favorable demographics and rebounding job growth should help keep sales running at a fairly robust rate this year. Source: Wells Fargo Bank. WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 3.07%	APR 3.23%	The housing market continues to be white-hot, but there are some signs of a modest cool down on the horizon. Sales improved during January, with existing home sales advancing 0.6% and new home sales rising 4.3%. The robust pace of sales recently has been mostly owed to increased household space needs and low mortgage rates. While larger space requirements are still driving purchase demand, mortgage rates have begun to creep up alongside a climbing 10-year Treasury yield. Mortgage rates are still very low by historical standards, but rising financing costs together with low inventories and double-digit home price appreciation may be starting to dampen buying conditions. Pending home sales, which lead contract closings by one to two months, slipped 2.8% in January. What's more, mortgage applications for purchase declined in February after steadily climbing for most of January. With both mortgage applications and pending home sales retreating, we expect home sales to pull back in coming months. Even with some moderation, however, favorable demographics and rebounding job growth should help keep sales running at a fairly robust rate this year. Source: Wells Fargo Bank.
