WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE	APR
	6.50%	7.00%	Economic uncertainty has produced a double whammy for the housing market: sluggish home sales and plodding construction. In a May survey of builder confidence conducted by Wells Fargo and the National Association of Home Builders, home builder sentiment dropped to a level last seen in November 2023. The problem, as ever, is the cost of housing: Home prices are out of reach for many who would like to buy. And the tariff drama under President Trump has both made it more expensive to build new homes and made the future more unpredictable for would-be homebuyers. The result is a country where builders want to build, and buyers want to buy - but the future is too much in doubt. The first issue is a dip in demand. Lots of Americans would love to buy a home, but they simply can't afford to. Home prices are up nearly 50% since before the pandemic, and mortgage rates ticked up to 6.86% last week - a far cry from their pandemic low of 2.65% for a 30-year fixed-rate loan. Construction of single-family homes dropped in April, according to figures from the Census Bureau. Every indicator concerning single-family homes - building permits, starts of new homes and completions - was down compared to a year ago. This may have consequences for the future: A lack of permits now can mean fewer homes hitting the market later. Source: NPR Laurel Wamsley

Financing		Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 6.50%	APR 7.00%
FHA	6.25%	6.99%
10 Yr Yield	4.48%		Economic uncertainty has produced a double whammy for the housing market: sluggish home sales and plodding construction. In a May survey of builder confidence conducted by Wells Fargo and the National Association of Home Builders, home builder sentiment dropped to a level last seen in November 2023. The problem, as ever, is the cost of housing: Home prices are out of reach for many who would like to buy. And the tariff drama under President Trump has both made it more expensive to build new homes and made the future more unpredictable for would-be homebuyers. The result is a country where builders want to build, and buyers want to buy - but the future is too much in doubt. The first issue is a dip in demand. Lots of Americans would love to buy a home, but they simply can't afford to. Home prices are up nearly 50% since before the pandemic, and mortgage rates ticked up to 6.86% last week - a far cry from their pandemic low of 2.65% for a 30-year fixed-rate loan. Construction of single-family homes dropped in April, according to figures from the Census Bureau. Every indicator concerning single-family homes - building permits, starts of new homes and completions - was down compared to a year ago. This may have consequences for the future: A lack of permits now can mean fewer homes hitting the market later. Source: NPR Laurel Wamsley

Economic uncertainty has produced a double whammy for the housing market: sluggish home sales and plodding construction. In a May survey of builder confidence conducted by Wells Fargo and the National Association of Home Builders, home builder sentiment dropped to a level last seen in November 2023. The problem, as ever, is the cost of housing: Home prices are out of reach for many who would like to buy. And the tariff drama under President Trump has both made it more expensive to build new homes and made the future more unpredictable for would-be homebuyers. The result is a country where builders want to build, and buyers want to buy - but the future is too much in doubt. The first issue is a dip in demand. Lots of Americans would love to buy a home, but they simply can't afford to. Home prices are up nearly 50% since before the pandemic, and mortgage rates ticked up to 6.86% last week - a far cry from their pandemic low of 2.65% for a 30-year fixed-rate loan. Construction of single-family homes dropped in April, according to figures from the Census Bureau. Every indicator concerning single-family homes - building permits, starts of new homes and completions - was down compared to a year ago. This may have consequences for the future: A lack of permits now can mean fewer homes hitting the market later. Source: NPR Laurel Wamsley
