WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV RATE FHA 2.83% 2.25%			Sales of new homes rose 1.0% to a 708,000-unit pace, ending a three-month string of declines. Home buying activity has cooled off in recent months alongside soaring prices and shrinking inventories. Sales in June were also revised slightly higher and now show a 2.6% drop, compared to a 6.6% drop reported earlier. Low inventories and the rapid run-up in prices have led prospective buyers to put their home-buying plans on hold, which explains a softer pace of sales in recent months. The pullback also makes sense considering the extremely low inventories of completed homes available for sale and continuing supply chain disruptions that have led to project delays. Sales of homes where construction has not started rose 19% during July, while sales of homes under construction fell 13% to the lowest level since May 2020. The inventory picture appears to be improving slightly. The number of new homes for sale rose 5.5% to 367,000 in July. At the current sales pace, all the current inventory on the market would be sold in 6.2 months, up from six months in June and 3.6 months in July 2020. While the number of homes for sale rose at every stage of construction, most of the recent improvement in inventories has been for homes that have not yet started construction. ## WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 2.83%	APR 3.05%	Sales of new homes rose 1.0% to a 708,000-unit pace, ending a three-month string of declines. Home buying activity has cooled off in recent months alongside soaring prices and shrinking inventories. Sales in June were also revised slightly higher and now show a 2.6% drop, compared to a 6.6% drop reported earlier. Low inventories and the rapid run-up in prices have led prospective buyers to put their home-buying plans on hold, which explains a softer pace of sales in recent months. The pullback also makes sense considering the extremely low inventories of completed homes available for sale and continuing supply chain disruptions that have led to project delays. Sales of homes where construction has not started rose 19% during July, while sales of homes under construction fell 13% to the lowest level since May 2020. The inventory picture appears to be improving slightly. The number of new homes for sale rose 5.5% to 367,000 in July. At the current sales pace, all the current inventory on the market would be sold in 6.2 months, up from six months in June and 3.6 months in July 2020. While the number of homes for sale rose at every stage of construction, most of the recent improvement in inventories has been for homes that have not yet started construction. ### WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV			Sales of new homes rose 1.0% to a 708,000-unit pace, ending a three-month string of declines. Home buying activity has cooled off in recent months alongside soaring prices and shrinking inventories. Sales in June were also revised slightly higher and now show a 2.6% drop, compared to a 6.6% drop reported earlier. Low inventories and the rapid run-up in prices have led prospective buyers to put their home-buying plans on hold, which explains a softer pace of sales in recent months. The pullback also makes sense considering the extremely low inventories of completed homes available for sale and continuing supply chain disruptions that have led to project delays. Sales of homes where construction has not started rose 19% during July, while sales of homes under construction fell 13% to the lowest level since May 2020. The inventory picture appears to be improving slightly. The number of new homes for sale rose 5.5% to 367,000 in July. At the current sales pace, all the current inventory on the market would be sold in 6.2 months, up from six months in June and 3.6 months in July 2020. While the number of homes for sale rose at every stage of construction, most of the recent improvement in inventories has been for homes that have not yet started construction.
