WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 6.13%	APR 6.24%	Brighter days may be ahead for housing. New home sales surged 9.6% to a 683K-unit annualized pace in March, marking the third increase in the past four months. Low existing home inventories have supported demand in the new home market, and home builders have boosted sales by offering incentives. As demand for homes is starting to stabilize amid still-tight inventories, home prices have scope to break from their downward trend. The S&P CoreLogic Case-Shiller National HPI eked out a modest 0.2% increase in February after falling for the previous seven straight months. In February, the construction sector experienced its ninth consecutive monthly decline in residential outlays, in part the cause of the 0.1% month-over-month decline in total construction spending. Single-family home construction continued to wither in the face of high interest rates and still-high building costs, a trend that does not appear to be disappearing any time soon. Mortgage rates remain above 6%. Even as new home sales surprised to the upside in March, bringing it to its fastest annualized pace since March 2022, continued pessimism across the board weighs heavily on the housing market. WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 6.13%	APR 6.24%	Brighter days may be ahead for housing. New home sales surged 9.6% to a 683K-unit annualized pace in March, marking the third increase in the past four months. Low existing home inventories have supported demand in the new home market, and home builders have boosted sales by offering incentives. As demand for homes is starting to stabilize amid still-tight inventories, home prices have scope to break from their downward trend. The S&P CoreLogic Case-Shiller National HPI eked out a modest 0.2% increase in February after falling for the previous seven straight months. In February, the construction sector experienced its ninth consecutive monthly decline in residential outlays, in part the cause of the 0.1% month-over-month decline in total construction spending. Single-family home construction continued to wither in the face of high interest rates and still-high building costs, a trend that does not appear to be disappearing any time soon. Mortgage rates remain above 6%. Even as new home sales surprised to the upside in March, bringing it to its fastest annualized pace since March 2022, continued pessimism across the board weighs heavily on the housing market. WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

CONV	RATE 6.13%	APR 6.24%
FHA	6.25%	6.45%	Brighter days may be ahead for housing. New home sales surged 9.6% to a 683K-unit annualized pace in March, marking the third increase in the past four months. Low existing home inventories have supported demand in the new home market, and home builders have boosted sales by offering incentives. As demand for homes is starting to stabilize amid still-tight inventories, home prices have scope to break from their downward trend. The S&P CoreLogic Case-Shiller National HPI eked out a modest 0.2% increase in February after falling for the previous seven straight months. In February, the construction sector experienced its ninth consecutive monthly decline in residential outlays, in part the cause of the 0.1% month-over-month decline in total construction spending. Single-family home construction continued to wither in the face of high interest rates and still-high building costs, a trend that does not appear to be disappearing any time soon. Mortgage rates remain above 6%. Even as new home sales surprised to the upside in March, bringing it to its fastest annualized pace since March 2022, continued pessimism across the board weighs heavily on the housing market.
