WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV			New residential construction is stronger than the recent headline data would suggest. Total housing starts dropped 4% in July, which marked the third consecutive monthly decline. That noted, much of the recent weakness is owed to declines in multifamily construction. While still relatively elevated, the multifamily segment appears to have topped out. Many major apartment markets in the Northeast and West are highly exposed to slowing global growth and are likely feeling the reverberations from diminishing international investment. Still, activity will likely remain sturdy as multifamily building permits leaped 21.8% during July. On the other hand, single-family construction appears to have the wind at its back thanks to an overall improvement in buying conditions. Single-family starts followed up a strong 6.3% gain in June with a solid 1.3% rise in July. Given that permits have risen for three straight months, we expect single-family activity to continue to climb. The Fed appears set to trim the federal funds rate an additional 25 bps during the September 17-18 FOMC meeting. In recent public remarks, Fed Chair Powell has reiterated that the FOMC would "act as appropriate" to maintain the now record-long expansion. Source: Wells Fargo Bank. 			New residential construction is stronger than the recent headline data would suggest. Total housing starts dropped 4% in July, which marked the third consecutive monthly decline. That noted, much of the recent weakness is owed to declines in multifamily construction. While still relatively elevated, the multifamily segment appears to have topped out. Many major apartment markets in the Northeast and West are highly exposed to slowing global growth and are likely feeling the reverberations from diminishing international investment. Still, activity will likely remain sturdy as multifamily building permits leaped 21.8% during July. On the other hand, single-family construction appears to have the wind at its back thanks to an overall improvement in buying conditions. Single-family starts followed up a strong 6.3% gain in June with a solid 1.3% rise in July. Given that permits have risen for three straight months, we expect single-family activity to continue to climb. The Fed appears set to trim the federal funds rate an additional 25 bps during the September 17-18 FOMC meeting. In recent public remarks, Fed Chair Powell has reiterated that the FOMC would "act as appropriate" to maintain the now record-long expansion. Source: Wells Fargo Bank. WEEKLY FINANCIAL NEWS

Financing			Market Commentary
CONV	RATE 3.54%	APR 3.66%	New residential construction is stronger than the recent headline data would suggest. Total housing starts dropped 4% in July, which marked the third consecutive monthly decline. That noted, much of the recent weakness is owed to declines in multifamily construction. While still relatively elevated, the multifamily segment appears to have topped out. Many major apartment markets in the Northeast and West are highly exposed to slowing global growth and are likely feeling the reverberations from diminishing international investment. Still, activity will likely remain sturdy as multifamily building permits leaped 21.8% during July. On the other hand, single-family construction appears to have the wind at its back thanks to an overall improvement in buying conditions. Single-family starts followed up a strong 6.3% gain in June with a solid 1.3% rise in July. Given that permits have risen for three straight months, we expect single-family activity to continue to climb. The Fed appears set to trim the federal funds rate an additional 25 bps during the September 17-18 FOMC meeting. In recent public remarks, Fed Chair Powell has reiterated that the FOMC would "act as appropriate" to maintain the now record-long expansion. Source: Wells Fargo Bank.
